Cat Mummies

Cat Mummies as Votive Offerings. Cat mummies discovered in early excavations at Bubastis were probably the first to be seen by Western explorers/archaeologists, but the cat cemetery unearthed at Beni Hasan (a site roughly 100 miles south of Cairo and known for its beautiful tombs), was carefully described by a Western observer. In 1888, near the rock-cut temple dedicated to the lion goddess Pakhet, a huge cat cemetery was discovered.

The poor, rich, maligned One Percenters. Maligned, we understood, because of our bits of Envy-DNA. But that aside, how on Earth did this tiny percentile amass such huge fortunes in the first place? Through labile ethics, laser focus, and sometimes with the help of far out-of-town guests, that's how. There's nothing to it ---but for being 100% human--- for several people near Sun Valley, Idaho. Among them: a hustling pilot named Marcus; a hustling, pistol-packing equestrienne called Bra; Wesley, the world's first billionaire veterinarian, but still hustling; and a markedly not-hustling nano-technology mogul, Gumbo the Cannibal. Together with a villa, and a barn, populated with scheming cats, a voyeur owl, and an addlebrained rattlesnake, they are poised to become the most celebrated creatures on Earth. They have made the first indisputable Contact with an extraterrestrial race, two of whom have come here on a quest for a cat mummy. Tail of the Cat Mummies is no more simply a cat-and-dog story than Animal Farm is an agricultural primer. In fact, Tail could be thought of as the funny distant cousin of Animal Farm, focusing on dystopian wealth, instead of fascist tyranny.

A temple cat in ancient Egypt grows tired of being worshipped and cared for in a reverent fashion and travels to the seaside, where she finds genuine affection with a fisherman and his children.

An addition to a popular science series reveals how today's cutting-edge technology--such as x-rays, DNA testing, and forensics--is helping to teach scientists more than ever about mummies from across the world.
